Summary

I am a freelance .NET web developer with great technical expertise and unusual analytic skills. My insight into web as a platform and my understanding of user friendly applications makes me a very valuable asset to your web projects.

Specializing in Umbraco CMS for more than 9 years makes me an expert in this area. It also gives me a good understand of most other Content Management Systems, such as EPiServer and SiteCore.

I won't be offended if you tell me you think I have OCD. I am very passionate about my work. I actively help lift the projects I am working on, and I get things done. I work well independently as well as in a team.

Last but not least, I am well liked and respected among clients, colleagues and partners alike.

Skills

A selection of the most relevant and important skills I have acquired during my time working as a professional web developer.

I have worked with Microsoft .NET my entire career, and specialized in implementation and development with Umbraco CMS as a platform. That makes me an excellent choice for any .NET based project.
